READ TOGETHER

A four week Bible book club guide

A free digital reading guide

Before you begin

This guide gives a new group four simple meetings. Read the passage aloud, make room for silence, then use the questions to begin an honest conversation. There is no need to have a polished answer. Notice what stands out, listen to one another, and return to the text together.

A simple way to use this book

A helpful rhythm: welcome one another; read the passage twice, perhaps in two voices; let everyone name a word or detail they noticed; use two or three questions; end by naming one small practice for the coming week. A meeting can take 35 to 60 minutes.

LUKE 10:25-37

A NEIGHBOR

Read the parable and pay attention to the movement of each person on the road.

Questions for reading

What question begins the exchange, and how does Jesus answer it?

Which details make the injured person's need concrete?

Where do you notice compassion becoming action?

Who might be easy for your group to overlook?

Carry it into the week

Choose one practical act of care this week. Keep it specific and possible.

Your notes

A SHEPHERD

Read the psalm slowly, leaving a short pause after each line.

Questions for reading

Which image feels closest to your life right now?

Where does the psalm move from speaking about God to speaking to God?

What might rest look like in a busy week?

How can a group make room for someone walking through a difficult season?

Carry it into the week

Make ten quiet minutes for reading the psalm again. Write down one phrase to carry with you.

Your notes

MARK 4:35-41

A STORM

Notice the setting, the disciples' question, and Jesus' response.

Questions for reading

What do the disciples fear most in the story?

Which moment changes the direction of the scene?

What questions remain at the end?

How do people in your group tend to respond when circumstances feel uncertain?

Carry it into the week

Ask someone how they are doing and give them your full attention.

Your notes

JOHN 15:1-17

A VINE

Read the passage once for repeated words and once for its invitation.

Questions for reading

What words or ideas return more than once?

How does the passage connect abiding and loving?

What does friendship mean in this conversation?

What could change in your group if you practiced this kind of care?

Carry it into the week

Write one sentence about a relationship you want to tend with care.

Keep the conversation open. Revisit a passage, invite a new voice, or choose another book of the Bible to read together. The goal is not to finish a set of questions; it is to grow in attention and care.
